Renaturation of the Great Laaber river in Schierling, Germany. The Mintraching Lohgraben stream runs through the centre of the built-up area and is not freely accessible from any side. The excavator had to drive through a rural estate into the water. Equipped with an extra-wide swamp buggy chassis, the material could be extracted from the middle of the trench and placed to the side by the excavators. With a second excavator, the material was loaded onto one of our trucks.
